Books are a part of man's prerogative. In formal ink they thought and voices bind. That we to them our solitude may give. And make time present travails Our life, tame paces longer at the end. And books it farther backward doth extend.—Taylor

Andrew and Imogene

BY ROSE FELKERSON.

ANDREW, do you love me as much as you used to?" asked Imogene in a pathetic voice.

"I think," assented her husband, without looking up from his paper.

"But you like a lot of other women better than you do me, don't you?" she asked in exactly the same tone.

"Yes, indeed," he agreed, amiably.

"Who?" snapped Imogene.

"Who, what?" answered Andrew, lowering his paper. "I didn't quite get you."

"Who is this other woman you have just confessed you love better than me?"

"Another woman? I confessed I loved? How did you get this way?"

"And you know perfectly well I did not know what I was answering," said Andrew.

"I was interested in the new lineup of the team, and I was not paying much attention."

"That is just the trouble," said Imogene, her lip trembling. "You are more interested in the lineup of the team than you are in loving me; you are more interested in fishing than you are in loving me; you are more interested in business than you are in loving me; you are more interested in everything than you are in loving me."

"And you know perfectly well I did not know what I was answering," said Andrew.

"I was interested in the new lineup of the team, and I was not paying much attention."

"Any person in this world who decides to be sorry for themselves can find more reasons for it than that guy in Pittsburgh makes brands of pieaces. You will forget everything you ought to be thankful for and recall only those things which are missing."

"I was going through the kitchen yesterday and Sarah had a breadpan or dishpan or some sort of a pan three feet across and it was piled full of spinach or some sort of greens."

"I looked at the pan and thought of the size of this family and asked her what to the name of all that was sacred in domestic economy she was going to do with all that stuff."

"She just laughed and her fat cheeks shook and said: 'Jesus you wait! Mr. Andrew, just look what happens to a man's affection after he has been married 10 or 12 years. They get tired down.' All that is of any account is right there still. He substitutes a knowing glance for a kiss with a smack to it. A simple pressure of the hand takes the place of the hug which used to get your waist all wrinkled, and he is just as loving but less demonstrative."

"I care hundred times as much about you now as I did when I used to fuss you up and be jealous of you. I know you better, and the more I know you the nicer and sweeter you are to me, and right at this minute you are the most interesting person I know. I might add, the neatest single one also. Do you believe me?"

"Of course I do dear, but you do make love so nicely I just have to make you do it now and then for old times' sake."

"Well, what do you know about that?" asked Andrew, looking with amazement at his smiling spouse.

Costs Higher in Europe.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Higher production costs in Europe are greater than in the United States at the present time as viewed by the federal reserve board as a serious handicap to the development of their prewar export trade to the United States as a means of paying off their indebtedness to this country and liquidating purchases of raw material.

MORLEY QUITS AS PRISON WARDEN TO GO INTO BANK

Special to The World.

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 8.—Although the resignation of Sam L. Morley as warden of the state penitentiary has not been received by Governor Robertson, it has been expected for some time that it has been known that Warden Morley has long been desirous of relinquishing his official position in order to become affiliated with a McAlester banking institution. Reports from McAlester state that the warden has asked to be relieved at once.

Five state Governor, Robertson, office the names of at least a dozen men have been connected with the office of warden of the state prison, which, it was rumored early in the year, was to be vacated by Morley at the request of the governor. Later these reports were denied by both the governor and by the warden, who, when asked, said the best of feelings prevailed.

Morley was appointed warden of the state penitentiary by Governor Williams soon after R. W. Dick resigned three years ago. Morley was at that time a member of the state board of affairs. His record as a warden has been uniformly good.

Morley was appointed warden of the state penitentiary by Governor Williams soon after R. W. Dick resigned three years ago. Morley was at that time a member of the state board of affairs. His record as a warden has been uniformly good. In the opinion of Governor Williams, in contrast to the stormy administration of Warden Dick, there has been little or no criticism of the work of Warden Morley and there have been no whisperings of graft or dishonesty.

The board points out in its forthcoming budget that, according to an abstract made public today, the higher costs in many lines of manufacture place European countries at a decided disadvantage in competing with American producers.
